

September 28, 2020

Carolyn Long Contesting WA03

Results from a recent survey of likely voters

To: Interested Parties

From: GQR

With five weeks until Election Day, Carolyn Long is in a strong position against Jaime Herrera Beutler. GQR conducted a poll of 400 likely general election voters. The poll was conducted via live dial interviewing from September 24th-26th. The survey has a margin of error of +/- 4.9 percentage points at the 95 percent confidence interval. The following are key findings from the poll:

- Five term incumbent Herrera Beutler is under 50 percent; Long trails by just 2 points. The vote is within margin of error: 47 percent Long - 49 percent Herrera Beutler, with 4 percent of voters undecided.
- Long is viewed more favorably than Herrera Beutler. Long holds a net +11 favorability rating, compared to Herrera Beutler's +5 rating.
- Joe Biden is tied with Donald Trump in the district. Biden is statistically tied with Trump: 47-48 percent, with 6 percent of voters undecided.

Figure 1: Washington's Third Congressional District Vote

